Van Horn Law Group, P.A. offers free advice to head off financial woes due to pandemic

Van Horn Law Group, P.A. today announced it would offer free legal financial advice to those who anticipate monetary distress due to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. The bankruptcy firm, experts on legal issues surrounding finances, is offering free video and phone conferences to both businesses and individuals to discuss ways to survive the negative financial consequences COVID-19.

The move comes as legal industry experts expect a strong uptick in bankruptcy over the coming months and beyond as a result of significant slowing of economic activity due to social distancing measures established by governmental officials.

“While it may seem counterintuitive for a bankruptcy firm to offer strategies to stay out of bankruptcy, we see this as simply a gesture of goodwill, a way we can help our neighbors proactively deal with the prospect of looming financial distress,” said Chad Van Horn, Esq., founding partner attorney of Van Horn Law Group. “As a bankruptcy firm, we live in a world of worst-case scenarios. But we also know all the tactics and methods to sidestep financial misfortune. We would like to share that knowledge – free of charge – with those who are fearful of their financial future.”
